

The cancellation waitlist

A clear offer for each client.
Less chasing for the front desk.

Competing staff texts promised one Saturday opening to two clients. One arrived expecting a booking and left angry.

A goal, not a measured result

One offer at a time

Eligible clients are contacted in the order they joined the waitlist.

- | | | |
|----|--------------------------|--|
| 01 | Match the opening | Match service, availability and required stylist. Skip clients who opted out of texts. |
| 02 | Offer 15 minutes | Contact one client. Show the service, stylist, appointment time and offer deadline. |
| 03 | Keep moving | A decline or timeout advances to the next eligible client. They stay on the waitlist. |
| 04 | Fill once | A timely acceptance fills this opening. Lena or Carla then updates Square manually. |

The front desk stays in control

See the outcome

The accepted client is named, with a reminder to update Square.

Act when needed

Retry or skip a failed send. Withdraw an opening that disappears.

Prototype screen. Text messages are simulated.

The offer survives interruptions

Temporal remembers the offer, its deadline and the replies. Restarting the service keeps the original clock running.

The promise stays current

Late or duplicate replies cannot claim the opening. Withdrawing it ends the active offer.

Consent can change

If the active client opts out, end the offer and move to the next eligible person.

Outreach follows salon hours

Normal mode: Tue-Sat, 9 a.m.-6 p.m., Phoenix time. Wait until reopening; stop at the appointment start.

A small trial with Lena and Carla

Proposed next step: review the next 10 last-minute cancellations together.

WHAT TO MEASURE

Refilled slots

Count filled / total cancellations.

Aim for at least 5 of 10; today is about 3.

Staff effort and mix-ups

Count manual checks or texts per opening.

Record any duplicate promise or late-reply issue. Review results with Lena and Carla.

WHAT THIS PROTOTYPE SHOWS

Simulated texts. Waitlist saved in this browser. No staff login. Square updates stay manual.

Demo mode uses 20-second offers and an open-salon clock. Normal mode uses 15 minutes and real salon hours.

Before a live trial: connect SMS, add access controls, and check Square booking conflicts.
